Smartphones Are Changing Peoples' Lives in Africa

Smartphones, more than any other previous invention, have been changing the lives of Africans all over the continent. There are more people using mobile phones in Africa than in Europe and America combined. In fact, smartphone use is growing fast on the entire continent, especially in regions south of the Sahara desert. In 2016 the number increased to close to a billion. Today, there are 600 million smartphone users in Africa.

Smartphones provide a wide variety of services that citizens, especially in rural areas, wouldn't otherwise have. In education, they are a learning tool for students who live in places where it is hard to get to schools. Smartphones are used for farming projects, where farmers can get information on crop prices using app. Health websites tell villagers what to do in case of emergencies when no doctor is available or far away.

People even use smartphones for entertainment in areas where there is no TV. More people in Africa have access to the internet than to clean water or sanitation.

In the last ten years, the number of smartphone users in Africa has increased greatly Kenya, especially is strongly connected. The country is also called Silicon Savanna because 92 % of all Kenyans go online through smartphones.
