Benny'sWeird Festivals

Last year, Benny Aziz went to some extraordinary festivals around the world. I caught up with him in California and found out more in an internet interview.

Battle of the Oranges: First, Benny told me about the three-day Battle of the Oranges, which takes place every February in Ivrea, Italy. About 3,000 people dress up in colourful costumes and throw over 360 tonnes of oranges at each other!

'Guards' ride in horse-drawn carts; the 'common people' stay on the ground. Spectators who don't want to be hit wear red hats. After the procession, it takes a team of 100 workers to clean up the city!

Up Helly Aa Fire Festival: Benny's year started at the Up Helly Aa fire festival in the Shetland Islands, north of Scotland. On the last Tuesday of January, the small town of Lerwick goes mad for 24 hours. At 7.30pm, 1,000 'guizers', men dressed as Vikings, carry flaming torches and a replica Viking longship through the streets. There are fireworks, marching bands, and at least 5,000 spectators. At the end of the procession, the longship is burnt in a huge bonfire. I asked if Benny had slept that night. He said the celebrations ended at 8.30 in the morning!

Macaque Monkey Banquet: In November, Benny was in Thailand for the strangest dinner in the world. In the city of Lopburi, 20 top chefs prepare over 2,000 kilos of fresh fruit and vegetables, ice cream and jelly for up to 3,000 special guests. Macaque monkeys! The people believe the monkeys, which live in the city, bring them good luck. This enormous buffet is a way of saying 'thank you'.

Air Guitar Championship: I asked Benny if he had a favourite festival. He answered that his favourite is the Air Guitar World Championship in Oulu, Finland, held every August. The competition started as a joke in 1996, but it soon became very popular. Now around 8,000 spectators watch the competitors play their imaginary guitars to rock music. And the prize for the best air guitarist? A real guitar!
